Winged Migration, an Academy Award nominee for best documentary, swoops you into the sky to travel side-by-side with birds as they fly thousands of miles across continents and oceans tracking migratory patterns of birds, shot over the course of four years on all seven continents. It was shot using in-flight cameras, most of the footage is aerial, and the viewer appears to be flying alongside birds of successive species. Directed by: Jacques Perrin, Jacques Cluzard

"This is a film of beauty, a film that will leave you dreaming about what it would be like to step off the edge of the world and discover you could fly." Washington Post
